But Baker's ex-wife offered police another gruesome theory about what happened to Tina.
Gilliam Hopkins said he threatened to make her "disappear" by feeding her to the pigs – just like in Hollywood chiller Hannibal.

Baker, of Egham, Surrey, killed his wife on July 8, 2002, after she had spent the week-end at her new partner Derek Poplett's home. Tina failed to meet Mr Poplett as arranged later that day. She left behind her clothes and beloved Alsatian dog.
Baker insisted he had been at work at a precision engineering firm all day.

Baker said Tina – whose bank account was untouched – had simply disappeared. He kept up the act by asking her parents and pals for sightings.

But her family did not report her missing as she had gone AWOL before. Baker himself went to police two weeks later. He was charged last year when detectives felt enough time had passed to prove his wife was dead.

Jurors were not told that during the inquiry Baker was arrested for using his home as a cannabis factory and was jailed for four years in June. He will be sentenced later this month.

Shows 'don't swear it well'

by LAURA NEIL
TELLY shows in which celebrity bosses humiliate junior staff encourage school bullying, it was claimed last night. Teachers' leader Chris Keates said programmes which show stars "shouting and swearing" at others legitimise bullying. Ms Keates, NASUWT general secretary, said the spate of TV shows about obese toddlers and teenagers also handed yobs ammunition for taunting children with weight problems.

Blamed

Speaking at the union's conference on bullying in London, Ms Keates said: "How do you discourage bullying and demonstrate it is wrong when youngsters see celebrity status and money can be acquired on the basis of shouting and swearing at and humiliating others?" Ms Keates also blamed media coverage of national campaigns to improve school dinners prompted by celebrity chef Jamie Oliver, 31 – for spawning TV programmes which focus on overweight kids. She claimed that in many cases these programmes oversimplified the causes of the problem as "irresponsible parenting". shippined the causes of the problem as "irresponsible parenting, poor diet, lack of exercise and lack of self-control".

salary and any savings into the account, your mortgage debt immediately shrinks and so does the interest you repay each month. This has exactly each month. Inis has exactly the same effect as overpaying your mortgage, except you don't have to pay any extra. You could even see your mortgage shrink in size from one month to the next.

You are also free to overpay whenever you have cash to

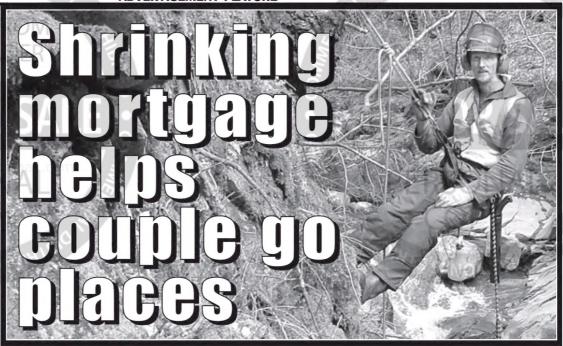

You are also free to overpay whenever you have cash to spare, and if you have any savings you can pay those in as well to help shrink your mortgage even faster. One day you might find your mortgage has shrunk so much it completely disappears, years ahead of schedule. Just imagine life with an ever shrinking mortgage. All that extra cash to spend on enjoying yourself, or to save for your future.

THE O*ne* account changed our lives

The One account's amazing flexibility helped Graeme and Moya Morison pay off their entire £84,000 mortgage in less than four years. Now they are celebrating by starting a thrilling new life in the South of France.

Graeme and Moya, from Pitlochry, Scotland, switched their mortgage on their 4 bedroomed cottage to the One account in April 2003. Transferring your savings to the One account gives you a much better return, because instead of earning return, because instead of earning interest at a savings rate you save interest at the One account's mortgage rate. And because you are saving interest rather than earning it, you don't have to pay any tax either. Graeme and Moya have now cleared their mortgage and are celebrating by taking an even bolder step. "We both turn 55 next year and are going to take early retirement and move to the south of France, near Toulouse. MORTGAGE

MORTGAGE

Most of your financial savings will be made by finding the best mortgage deal, especially if you're still stuck on your lender's standard variable rate. If you're one of the eight million that are, you will see an extra £15 or so added after last week's interest rate rise.

But swap from a Bank of Scotland 6.9% SVR to a two-year fix with an interest rate below 5% and you could save around £200 a month – or £2,400 a year.

PERSONAL LOANS

If you've got a bank loan with an interest rate of more than 6% or 7% you need to swap right now.
There are a handful of lenders with loans at under 6%. That means if you swap a £7,000 loan over five years on an interest rate of 10.9% to the Moneyback Bank loan of 5.6% APR you could save £16.51 a month in interest or £198.12 a year.

PLASTIC
A £2,000 debt on a credit card at 16.9% will be costing you lots of money.
There are more than 50 cards offering 0% interest

There are more than 50 cards offering 0% interest on balance transfers and despite having to pay moving fees you'll still be quids in.

The GE Money Transformation card has no interest for the first 12 months so swap your balance to that and you'll save £64 after the balance transfer fee has been deducted.

Once the 12 months are up you could swap again if you haven't paid off the balance. You won't incur any fees unless there's another balance transfer fee to pay another year down the line.

You may be tempted to use a store card at this time of year but don't!

A store card with an interest rate of 29.9% APR and a £2,000 balance will set you back £481 in interest alone each year and that's a huge waste of money.

Cut your store card up and put the balance on a 0% credit card – you'll save £481.

SAVINGS Make sure you check where

Make sure you check where you've got your nest egg.

If it's languishing in a poorly paying account you'll just be throwing interest down the drain.

If you swap savings of £10,000 from a 1.2% deal to an account paying more than 5% – like the Birmingham Midshires Instant Easy Access Issue 6 account, which pays interest of 5.2% – you'll pocket £400 extra every year.

CAR INSURANCE

CAR INSURANCE
Obviously it depends on the car you drive and your no-claims history but the driver of a Land Rover Freelander could save over £160 a year just by swapping from and Endsleigh policy to Direct Line.

HOME INSURANCE

Depending on where you live you could save a similar amount by switching your home cover too.

ENERGY
You can easily slash your energy bill by switching to a cheaper firm. Up to 10 million of us are still paying too much for our gas and electricity because we haven't moved. There are savings of up to $285 if you swap from British Gas to the cheapest supplier.

CURRENT ACCOUNTS

Move away from massive overdraft charges to the Lloyds TSB Classic Current Account which charges 18% for your overdraft. With a £1,500 facility you'll save over £250 every year.

WISE GUYS

HIGHER milk prices have helped Robert Wiseman Dairies to deliver a near 40% hike in profits.
The Glasgow dairy firm lost a major contract to supply Asda last year but is on the way back after renewing major contracts with J Sainsbury and Somerfield.

Somerfield.
After teaming up with with farmers' co-operative OMSCo it also won a contract to supply Tesco with 60% of its own-brand organic milk. The new contracts ensured £17.1m pre-tax profits on sales of £708.7m for six months to

The firm used to make 3p on every litre but achieved only 2.86p at the half-year stage. Costs rose by more than 9% as higher plastic prices pushed up the price of cartons. Chief executive Robert Wiseman said: "After a difficult period we are recovering."

Shares rose 12.75 to 462.25p.

GIRL SHOWS THE FORM TO TURN 00

SOO CANCA

STUNNING Danielle Lloyd looks Oh! Oh! heaven in this sin-sational James Bondinspired lingerie.

Inspired lingerie.

The 22-year-old beauty and girl-friend of West Ham striker Teddy Sheringham, 40, couldn't wait to strip off for these sexy new shots.

Things are getting better and better for the brainy babe, despite the fact that she was stripped of her Miss Great Britain crown earlier this month.

Bosses at lingerie firm Valisere reckon Mensa member Danielle has the perfect credentials to promote their latest looks. And who can argue? With an enviable 34C-25-35 figure she really is licensed to thrill in these styles – which are aptly

What's more the Liverpool lovely is shaping up to make a glamorous entrance to the Royal premiere of the latest Bond film Casino Royale tonight.

Gold

And Danielle is a girl on a mission of her own. She says: "I'm going to be the golden girl of the premiere."
"I'll be wearing a shimmering gold dress which is being made especially for me by top fashion house Lipsy.
"I can't wait to get on the red carpet and give the crowds a view to a thrill!

"I have to say Sean Connery is my favourite James Bond – he played the role with such sex appeal and humour.

"But I'll let you into a secret: I call Teddy my fir Bond because he has all those qualities and more."

Danielle has also just signed an exclusive deal with beauty brand Kimia to promote their luxury skin care range.

So look out Mr Bond – this girl's out to take over the world!

NIGHTMARES (Channel 4, 9pm). Gobsmacked Gordon can hardly believe his eyes, or his tastebuds, which is hardly surprising. Eating insects in I'm A Celebrity must present much less of a challenge than eating here. So what is wrong with the place exactly? Well, if I tell you that the food is undercooked and probably life-threatening – and that there's dog muck on the restaurant floor – you'll soon get the picture. Needless to say, the exotic-sounding La Parra de Burriana isn't exactly awash with satisfied customers queueing up to hand over their Euros in exchange for top nosh. In fact, it's been ior top nosh. In fact, it's been losing money ever since Laurence set it up 18 months ago with a £40,000 loan from his poor old dad. This is a tough one even for rip-roaring Ramsay. But if anyone can turn this failing business around then surely it's him. By the way, it's probably best not to be eating your supper while this stomach-churner is on.

THE RESERVE OF THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN TWO IS NOT THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN TO THE PERSON NA

BEFORE an audience of academics, in 1981, American professor Stanley Schachter unveiled his theory of 'bubba psychology'.

In it, he argued that the average grandmother - called a 'bubba' in Yiddish - could outwit an economist when it came to investing money, because she understood more about human emotions.

Not surprisingly, a lot of experts disagreed -

Not surprisingly, a lot of experts disagreed Not surprisingly, a lot of experts disagreed even those with grandmothers. But you couldn't have asked for a better demonstration of Professor Schachter's point than MIDDLE CHILD SYNDROME (Five) – an interesting, but mostly unconvincing study of how your ranking in the family affects your chances in life. "Can something of which you have absolutely no control over – the order in which you were born - cast a shadow over your entire life?" asked the narrator - demonstrating that, whatever kind of grandma she'd had, she needed some help with her grammar. But it was a fair point to make

Isolated

It's obvious that the oldest and the youngest kids in a family receive very different upbringings, which can then affect the way they behave as grown-ups.

More controversially, some think that middle children receive the shortest straw when it comes to family life – they report being left out, feeling isolated and unloved. Some are easily-led and in a bid to get noticed, turn to what my own bubba would describe as 'playing up' – or delinquent behaviour, if you're a psychologist.

...ON LAST NIGHT'S T

Vaguely tempting as this idea was, it wasn't clear how it applied to families of four or five, where there wasn't an obvious middle. And rather than get into that awkward sort of territory, this simply ignored it.

It proved nothing, except that you could argue pretty much anything about anyone, if you chose to. And so, most blatantly, did the experiment, in which two 'experts' tried to guess who, from a large group of people, had been the middle children.

Their two-out-of-three success rate was been the middle children.

Their two-out-of-three success rate was described as 'an incredible result'. And it was, because everyone's grandma could have done just as well, or better.

He only wants affairs

MY on-off lover is such a commitment phobe he only dates married

omy tates married women.
When we first met, I was happily wed and had never cheated on my husband. But my lover wooed me relentlessly and we started a passionate affair.
While I was still married, everything was fine. But the minute my husband found out about our secret relationship and walked out, my lover turned cold.

obsessed with his first wife.

She ran off with his best pal and he's so consumed with bitterness for the pair of them.

He talks about them all the time. It's his only topic of conversation. The other night we had a couple of new friends over for a meal.

The wife made the mistake of asking my husband about his past. He was very drunk and proceeded to rant about the shoddy way "they" treated him.

We had every little detail from the day he found a condom under the day he found a condom under the bed to the night he caught them having sex.

It was excruciating. Not once did look over at me and realise that I was squirming with embarassinent. It ended with him smashing his fist down on the table and screaming: "I was betrayed, I was betrayed."

He sent bottles and food flying in He sent bottles and food flying in all directions and then fell on the sofa and sobbed. The poor couple fled in horror and, yet again, I was left to pick up the pieces.

My teenage children absolutely hate him.

They are insulted that he's married to me, yet still going on about "her". They can't work out why he can't put the past behind him and neither can I.

Occasionally his daughter from his first marriage will come and occasionary his daughter from his first marriage will come and stay with us. All my husband does is quiz her about what her mother is doing, how her new stepdad is spending his money and what life is like at home.

The girl is very loyal and always sticks up for her mum, but my husband never misses an opportunity to slag her off.

The other night we were in bed

The other night we were in bed and he actually started speculating on the quality of their sex life compared to ours.

He found it hysterically funny to imagine his ex-mate with erection problems. I don't know how much more I can take.

JANE SAYS: You sound like a living saint for putting up with this.

this.

I can't imagine why you stay with this appalling man.
From what you say, he has absolutely nothing going for him.

(Calls cost 75p per minute from a BT landline)

He's cruel, obsessive, insensitive and bitter. Despite being in a new marriage with you, he continues to treat you like dirt. He's so consumed with the past that he's not willing or able to look forward. It's as if you're a second-class citizen and not important at all. Something has got to give. Either he's got to let go of his bitterness and dedicate himself fully to his new family or you've got to threaten to end this marriage and mean it.

I urge you to contact Relate He's cruel, obsessive, insensitive

I urge you to contact Relate without him, and seek relation-ship counselling.

Whatever happens, you've got to set yourself a time limit. If he hasn't totally changed in, say six months, then you've got to be prepared to move on.

Sis is too busy for me

abandoned by my sister.
This time last year we were so close. We spoke on the phone 10 times a day and saw each other every night.
But in a very short space of time her life has changed out of all recognition and there's no room for me.
Last Christmas she married a divorcee with Last Christmas she married a divorcee with three children. At first they lived with their mother. But she moved to Spain, so they moved in with my sister.

Laughs

Then she announced that she was pregnant. Her baby was born six weeks ago and I've hardly had a look-in since.

Every time I ring for a chat, she tells me that she's too busy. Whenever I suggest going for a coffee, she just laughs. I hate this.

JANE SAYS: You're being naive if you think your relationship with your sister can carry on as before. Her life has moved on nd yours must too.

I doubt she's got time to clean her teeth, let alone "go for a coffee".
Get real! Why don't you offer to cook a meal for you all? Or babysit or do a pile of ironing? Your sister needs practical help right now, not hours on the phone.

the phone.
Once her youngest child eventually starts school, then you'll be able to have your chats and occasional shopping again. Until then it's all hands on deck

Evil daughter's

I JUST don't understand my own daughter. I can't believe that I actually gave birth to her. She's nothing like the rest

She's 23 and spiteful, ruthless and dishonest. She's utterly selfish and only does things that will benefit her 100%. The latest thing is that she's stolen £200 from my mother. Her granny was the one person in our family who I actually thought she liked.

I just feel like giving up on her.

JANE SAYS: You've got to come down on this girl like a ton of bricks and make it absolutely clear that this behaviour is not acceptable.

Stealing from her own grandmother is so low that it beggars belief.

Ask your daughter if she has anything to say in her defence and if she intends to change defence and if she intends to change.

If she can't give you a straight answer, then maybe you'll have to decide that she is not someone you want to have in your life.
